Foreword

THROUGH the lens of the camera we have watched this year spread itself before us, like a vista—changing, teeming with life and activity. The camera shutter has clicked, and we have captured all that has made this year similar to—and yet so different from—any other year on the Harrisonburg campus.

Reading and Prayer

Let your moderation be known unto all men. The Lord is at hand. Be careful for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus. Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things.

Philippians 4:5-8

Our Father, may we incorporate within the citadels of our souls the first principles of living — so that we may be strong enough to select all that is worthy from amid the tawdry and undeserving, and so that we may be enabled to "see" things in their true proportion. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

Motto ♦ ♦ ♦ ♦

"That our daughters may be as corner-stones polished after the similitude of a palace."

Dedication

DR. EDNA TUTT FREDERIKSON

To one whose outstanding ability in journalism, whose knowledge and dynamic appreciation of the literary have been an impetus to students in that field; one whose vigorous personality has swung others into a faster, lighter pace—we are honored, in the year marking the publication of one of her own works, to dedicate this volume of

THE SCHOOLMA'AM

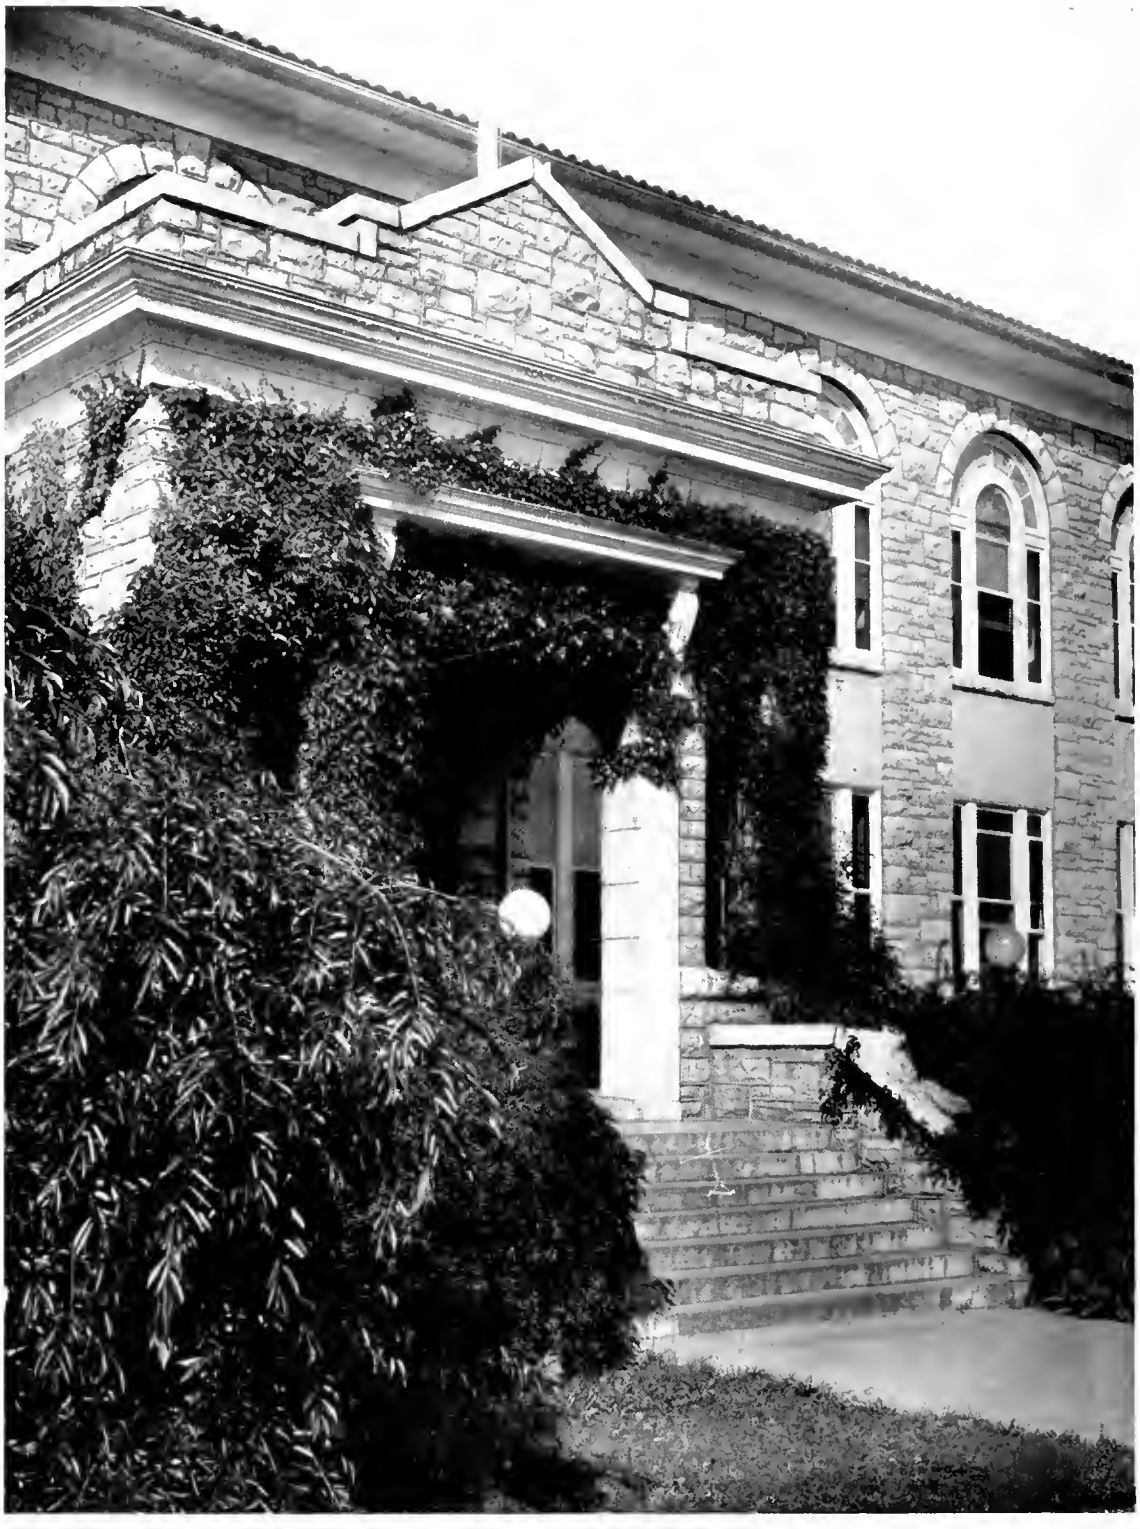
Book One

IT may be a corner room front in a freshman dormitory that invokes a rush of memories dating back to "time when"—that may even go so far as to call forth an indulgent smile. Or perhaps there is some classroom in Wilson that cost you more than a few hours of honest labor.

Any spot on campus will mean as many different things as there are students who know it. However, there are some buildings, some views across the quadrangle, that continue to be so completely enmeshed in the campus life as to become typical of the college. The scenes following belong to that group.

VIE

W S



Harrison Hall

The scene of much milling around—what with its library, bulletin boards, and (of course) the dining rooms and tea room.

Wilson Hall

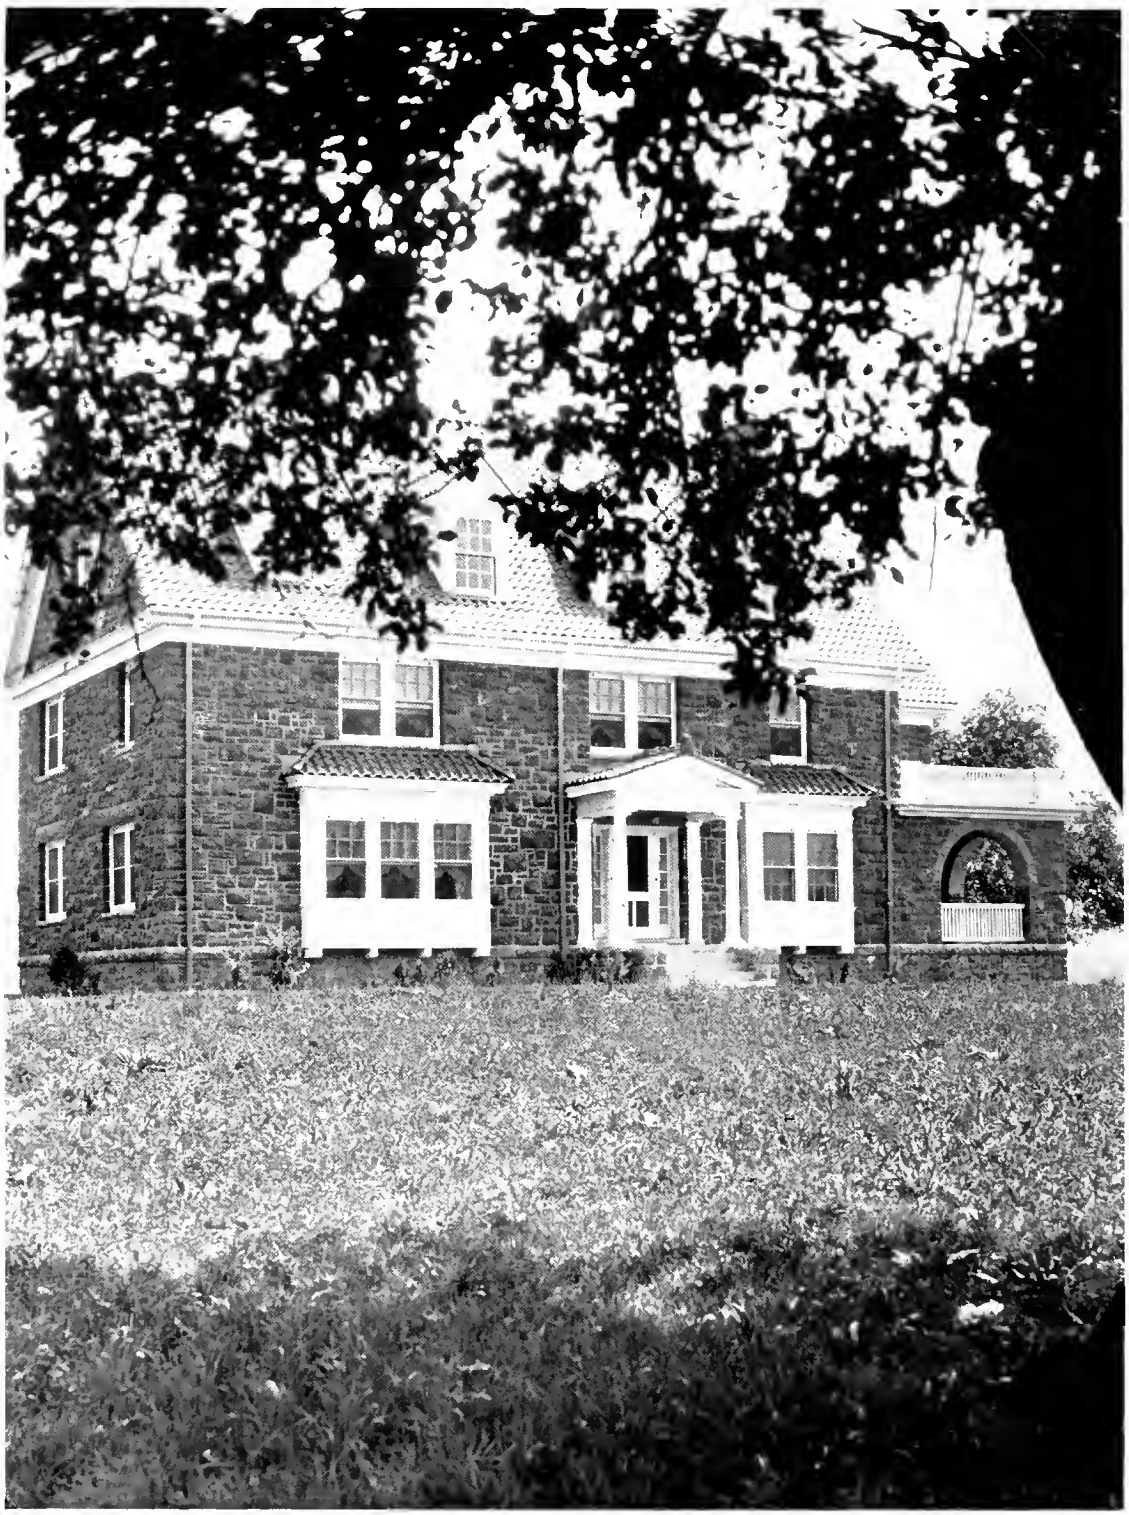
Location of the executive offices, Wilson auditorium, the frequently mobbed post office, and classrooms—easily the center of interest.

The President's Home

Scene of two major events of the year: the faculty reception for new students; the spring garden party for graduates.

Maury To Main

An exit and entrance to campus—reminiscent of jaunts to town, Linc's, the mail box; sprints to catch a northbound or a southbound bus.



Home Management Residence

Where the home-ec majors get their experience—running the gamut from maid to housekeeper.

Senior Hall

Senior Hall, equipped with suites like its counterpart, Junior Hall, affords opportunity for revealing and fostering the upperclassmen's savoir faire, and is a constant stimulus to the underclassmen's ambition.

Camp

Almost every week-end sees the bus roll into the college camp with a crowd of enthusiastic girls, and every week-end proves camp as delightful as ever.

Alumnae Hall

Much in demand for its reception rooms—the back-ground for five o'clock teas, receptions that do the honors to visiting colleges, dates.

Book Two

"FACULTY" means more to the students of Madison College than brief cases, term papers, special mannerisms, academic processions, or the group that files into chapel to sit apart on the left front. We know them also as instructors, interested in students, famous for individual conferences in busy offices; as sponsors of campus organizations, who hear all worries of inside details; as those with whom we share a jest in passing on the way to class; as inevitably the center of enthusiasm at the annual Home-Coming of Alumnae.

The PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

President

MADISON COLLEGE

On March 8, 1938, Governor James H. Price signed Senate Bill No. 14, which completed its passage through the General Assembly on February 17th. This bill provided that the State Teachers College at Harrisonburg, Virginia, should, after June 21, 1938, be known as "Madison College."

This name was selected in honor of James Madison, the fourth president of the United States and a native of Virginia. James Madison was, his entire lifetime, a vigorous advocate of both popular education of the masses and of higher education of our leaders, both men and women.

The educational philosophy of Madison may be summed up in this statement of his: "A popular government without popular information or the means of acquiring it is but a prologue to a farce or a tragedy or perhaps both."

The DEANS

A smile, a briefcase, and a gingerly step—Dr. Gifford turns to the right to enter the door marked "Dean." It is the beginning of the continual drive of another day filled to capacity with work.

He knows many students. Besides conferences with those who have problems with their schedules, with adjustments, he teaches classes. In these classes, where the chairs will be found arranged informally in a semi-circle, he widens his acquaintance with individual girls.

It is this sincere understanding of people, this boundless energy, this breadth of interests, this youthfulness, that have contributed to his success as Dean and professor.

Mrs. Cook's office in Alumnae Hall remains open during the greater part of each day while she is occupied with her many responsibilities as advisor to the great army of boarding students.

During this year, luncheons, dinners, receiving lines, have made enormous demands upon her as official hostess. Yet throughout it all she has met each occasion with equal freshness. Graciousness and the poise to meet any situation and handle it smoothly are a part of the regal charm of our Dean of Women.

THE FACULTY ON THE RUN

Miss Marbut arriving for classes . . . Miss Lyon turns a windy corner at Reed . . . Miss Aiken coming up the walk . . . Mr. Dingledine signs off for the day . . . Miss Brown going toward Alumnae . . . Yes, it's Mr. Marshall and Mr. Chappelear . . . Dr. Pittman — in his usual high spirits . . . The cameraman takes an option on getting Dr. Gifford's grin . . . It must have looked like rain when we snapped Dr. Huffman, Dr. Sawhill, and Mr. Hanson, but Dr. Converse isn't bothering about the weather . . . Dr. Duke at his best, pipe and all . . . Mrs. Varner and Miss Cleveland on a Sunday afternoon.

Book Three

THERE is a great amount of loyalty to the class into which each college year automatically deposits one. But then, it's no wonder. The girl who sits on the row in front and takes notes on a lecture as those around wish they could bring themselves to do, who groans with sympathy over an oncoming test; the gang one enjoys a run to town with, that stirs up fun in the dormitory; the leaders of campus organizations, who get one's heartiest cooperation—in fact, all the people one knows best and on the widest scale are members of one's class—that intricate unit which, multiplied by four, goes to make up a student body.

CLASS

CLASS DAY

Class day for the eldest class means donning caps and gowns as a symbol of attaining majority. The members of this class have worked and played together for their four years to reach this year the crest of accomplishment; to learn how to waste time more to an advantage; to become more responsive to any matter of concern to the alma mater; to recognize with a guilty feeling that graduation is slipping up.

With it all the class, casually and yet with indomitable spirit, will face the "confused times" as it may find them.

SENIOR CLASS HISTORY

It didn't take Einstein to prove that time is only relative. Any Senior could have told you. When we were freshmen (can any phrase combine more of pride and nostalgia?) our four college years seemed to stretch immeasurably before us; now, looking back, they telescope into so brief a span that it seems only yesterday that we stepped for the first time on the green lawns of our Alma Mater—and . . . were immediately told to keep off the grass!

Now that we're Seniors, we can admit that we weren't a very unusual Freshmen class—but, then, we were sure that we were destiny's children. When class day came, our traditional green was adapted to a cadet's costume and we all stood up and saluted all our professors. Gen Stone was our leader, but she left us that year—trailing clouds of glory behind her.

The whole class united during our Sophomore year to keep up the reputation of sophomores the world over. Even the mildest among us crept off in a quiet corner and sowed a wild oat.

And then we got our big break. Junior Hall—all new and shiny—was given to us for a year. This was our good year. We were almost as good as Seniors, and yet we didn't have the final break to look forward to. Strangely enough, our president this year was Ila Arrington—the same red-headed lady who had led us in our more boisterous sophomore year.

Our last year—the bus coming back—rounding the turn in the half-dark—freezing while we watched our hockey team struggle in the tournament—standing in line to register for classes—the smell of the Christmas tree in the dining hall—Senior Day and headaches from wearing our caps all day—our last Midwinter's—rain—those blizzards when your blankets weren't enough and you had to sleep with your roommate—seeing the Jooss ballet again—rain—seeing campus life reflected in "Sister Goat"—Stratford's more dignified "Torch Bearers"—exams—Homecoming, all our old friends back reminding us we'll soon be alumnae—home for Easter—back to lilacs and iris and spring fever—the May Court—ordering invitations—and . . .

Well, it was swell while it lasted. We can look back over our four years with perspective now. Many improvements have come to our school, and many to us too. Those green Freshmen—no, they surely weren't "us"!

It was State Teachers College when we came—Madison when we left. We have seen our school grow; our school has seen us grow.

The campus is left behind us—many of us may never see it again—but in what we are and what we shall become there will always be the mark of Madison College, our Alma Mater.

JUNIOR CLASS HISTORY

Being a Junior is a status not to be taken lightly. Besides inheriting such desirable gifts as Junior Hall, suite-mates, Education 330, Mollie, "riding dates," a little-sister class, the class of '39 now has the dignified title of "upperclassmen."

Under the leadership of our "Em," the Juniors have taken their responsibilities with much verve. Early in the school year, assistance was given to the Freshmen in their first class organization.

On March 18, dressed as classical artists, we Juniors thronged the campus and made it aware that our class day was revealing "artists" in every field": the artistic, the athletic, and the cultural.

And so, we have prepared for our last and most important year, which is already well on its way hither.

SOPHOMORE CLASS HISTORY

Renowned for its peppy administration, the Sophomore class stands unequaled in school spirit, and wings along at the head of many extra-curricular activities.

On class day, getting off to a harmonious start with "Mike" Lyne wielding the baton, the sophs, bedecked in top hats and green jackets plastered with white music notes, showed that they were keeping tempo with the modern world, and the entire day advertised the unique combination of rhythm and reason.

Behind their hilarious manner and broad grins, the members of the class have a more serious side, which leads high in academic achievement.

They are grateful for the encouragement given them by their sister class, and truly appreciative of their sponsors, Miss Marbut and Dr. Converse, who have helped them set their steps to the right music.

FRESHMAN CLASS HISTORY

The progress of the Freshman class has been marked by boundless enthusiasm, energy, and ambition from the time its members swarmed upon the scene, flanked with new luggage and attired in gay collegiate outfits, until the time when it might be said that that queer sort of feeling faded into a sense of well-being. The inevitable errors of Freshman life have served to bind them together and to interpret the true meaning of unity.

Perhaps their spirit was best caught on class day, when as Pirates on shore they mapped their defiant course as "Treasures fought for—knowledge sought for."

"READ the bulletin board!" Crowds thronging into the lobby of Harrison Hall around meal time slow up, congesting traffic, to snatch a look at the latest items posted there. Presidents of organizations post urgent calls for special meetings, scribble up reminders of weekly sessions to be held at the usual time and the usual place. Scores from basketball games or returns from elections go up.

The bulletin board is always cluttered, but with careful erasing and rearrangement, another announcement can always be managed.

MRS. ANNIE B. COOK MISS MARY LOUISE SEEGER

MR. R. C. DINGLEDINE

That friendly note in the cheery "hello," that fine cooperation in campus activities, and that high sense of honor upheld in class work—this is the spirit fostered by the Student Government Association.

This is the one organization in which every student holds membership. It is founded upon the motto, "Democracy is something deeper than liberty; it is responsibility"; and each member, in a fuller realization of this, strives to do her part to make government on campus truly a self-government. Officers and a council of representatives from each class are selected every year for the guidance of the association.

Traditional ceremony is a part of many of the activities which the Student Government Association sponsors. One of the main features of this year was the installation of their new officers, held in chapel during the spring quarter. Dignity and reverence lent an atmosphere to the service, which inspired the whole student body with a better concept of the responsibility that lay before each one as a member of the association. Dr. F. W. Boatwright of the University of Richmond gave an address entitled, "Virginia, Awake!"

At the beginning of each school year, the Old Girl-New Girl Wedding unites officially the new girls as one with the old girls and forms a bond between them "till graduation doth us part."

The organization also contributes a great deal of help to the new students by editing a "Student Handbook" containing information concerning campus, faculty, and class regulations; who's who among students and faculty; organizations and their functions; and helpful hints for Freshmen. Training classes for explaining the handbook to new students are held the first weeks of each school year.

You can always be sure there will be a real turnout for the annual Student Government outdoor supper, held the first Sunday evening after arrival. It is the first social gathering of the year, and here the Freshmen make their début before the student body.

It can truly be said that the spirit of any school is expressed in the form and organization of its government, and we hail Madison in our hearts as "one of the best."

SCHOOL MA'AM

"Do not wear socks to town." "Do not cut campus." "Do not wear gym clothes in the P. O." These are the incessant cries of our diligent standards committee. Far from being anti-social, they are responsible for the commendable demeanor which we are proud to have prevailing on our campus.

This committee, under the auspices of the student government, attempts to live up to its name by setting and preserving high standards of living on and off the college campus.

The chairman of this committee is appointed by the President of Student Government and the Dean of Women, with the approval of the student council. The chairman, with the aid of the Dean of Women and the President of Student Government, appoints the other seven members. The latter serve for three consecutive quarters with the student council, vested with the authority to make any changes in the membership of the committee that it may deem advisable. A written report of the committee's activities is sent each quarter to the student council.

The committee sponsors the annual Standards Day, at which time a fashion show presenting the latest in approved collegiate apparel is shown. On this day exhibits of correct campus formalities are also displayed in Harrison Hall.

A responsible and necessary mission is the work of these committeemen as they dauntlessly spread the gospel of the Standards Committee: "Rules enforced are not for one or two, but are for the general welfare of the Student Body as a whole—"

SOCIAL COMMITTEE

Flowers arranged tastefully in Alumnae Hall, candles in place, the log fire lighted, soft music playing sweetly—everything in readiness for another tea or reception.

When you walk into Blue-Stone Dining Hall to a banquet, do you think about all the details that have been arranged for the success of the evening? The line-up had to be made, checked, and double-checked. Then probably someone dropped out, and the whole thing had to be rearranged. Music had to be secured for your enjoyment throughout the meal. The unusual place-cards showed you where you were to sit.

Other social functions sponsored by this group—composed of three seniors, three juniors, and three sophomores—include planning and making place-cards and programs for the monthly birthday dinners and banquets, ushering at lyceum numbers and movies, sponsoring informal dancing in the gymnasium and most of the college dances. Each girl has a specific job to do and keeps a notebook to hand on to her successor.

We may well have pride in the poise and charm displayed by this group that sets the social standards for our college life.

THE YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

OFFICERS

President ..... HILDA FINNEY
Vice-President ..... HELEN HARDY
Secretary ..... LAFAYETTE CARR
Treasurer ..... WANDA SPENCER

The Young Women's Christian Association, with a membership of five hundred ninety-three students, this year became a still more vital part of campus life, as well as doing an increasing amount of social service work off campus. The leader, Hilda Finney, was ably assisted by a Cabinet of eighteen members.

During the spring quarter last year the old and new officers held their annual Cabinet Retreat to discuss plans for the coming session.

At commencement time a vesper service was sponsored by Y. W., with an address by Dr. D. T. Gregory and special music by the combined Glee Club, Choral Club, and Freshman Chorus.

In June Hilda Finney and Helen Hardy represented the college at the Southern Student Conference at Blue Ridge, North Carolina, and in July Agnes Thompson and Wanda Spencer attended the Presbyterian Church Conference at Massanetta Springs.

It was also during the summer that they notified old students as to who would be their "Little Sisters" for the following year.

Then came a busy fall quarter. The Y. W. C. A. took an active part in the orientation and registration of new students, made the welkin ring with step-singing on the night of its Big Sister-Little Sister Party, and conducted a consecration candlelight service, in which all the students took part.

The association also gave a Hallowe'en Banquet for the cabinet and sponsors, and at Thanksgiving time organized a Food-and-Clothes Drive for the Red Cross.

One of the highlights of the Christmas season was the annual Christmas Pageant, bringing to life the beautiful Bethlehem scene. Then, too, a Toy Drive was put on for children in the county schools and for needy families, in which students placed hundreds of gifts around the towering Christmas tree in Harrison Hall.

The winter program of the Y. W. began with a tea given for the State Hi-Y Conference. An Infantile Paralysis Drive was put on later.

An exchange program was arranged with the Y. M. C. A. at V. P. I.

Two services were sponsored each week by Y. W. as part of its regular work. Flowers and cards were also sent to students and faculty members experiencing illness or grief.

Cooperating with the Y. W. Cabinet were the Freshman Commission and the Sophomore Cabinet. They did social service work, made posters, took charge of some of the meetings, and helped in various other ways.

Our Y. W. belongs to the national organization of Y. W. C. A. It is wholly supported by the students, who are not required to pay a certain amount when they join, but pledge just as much as they wish.

THE ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

The Athletic Council, composed of the association officers, the class representatives, and sport leaders, is the directing body of the Athletic Association. In sponsoring a varied and interesting program of activities throughout the year, the council aimed to meet the needs and interests of every girl. During the last few years more emphasis has been placed on intramural sports. In this program intramural hockey, basketball, tennis, swimming, baseball, and golf were promoted, while both hockey and basketball were intercollegiate. Badminton, a sport newly introduced on campus, proved very popular among individuals for recreational and competitive purposes. The Hiking Club, too, was a source of outdoor activity for those who took no part in competitive sports.

One of the Athletic Association's major projects this year was sponsoring the Virginia Field Hockey Association Tournament. Teams from more than ten different colleges were represented and, through the Athletic Association, Harrisonburg acted as hostess to them. The teams were entertained at a luncheon.

Another project directed by A. A. was the giving of teas and receptions for various B. B. squads who played the varsity here.

"Sister Goat," a musical revue written by Dolores Phalen and Mike Lyne, and directed by Maxine Cardwell, was presented by the A. A. in February. It showed college life in the raw, from freshman to senior inclusive, in ten merry scenes.

Carrying out the custom initiated by the association two years ago, this year's council made known the May Queen, the Maid-of-Honor, and members of her court, by the tapping service. The corsages used for this ceremonial were made of spring flowers which carried out the school colors, purple and gold. A major activity of the association in the spring was organizing and presenting the May Day program.

THE BREEZE STAFF

"Gone with the Wind" may have taken the country by storm; but if it's news you're after, it's "coming with the Breeze." Every week this Madison version of the New York Times blows the how, when, where, what, and why of things to every member of the student body.

But the Breeze doesn't always puff its way from a cloudless sky. Often the conditions preceding its arrival resemble the approach of a hurricane—last-minute copy hurled right and left, typewriters frantically clacking, ominous mutterings from the editor, and the brazen peal of the telephone. Amidst such confusion each new Breeze draws its first breath and begins to blow. A scoop a week is its aim, but oh, well—a staff's reach must exceed its grasp, else what's an editor for?

Fifteen years ago the Breeze blew its first blast, and its velocity has been increasing steadily ever since. It celebrated its triumphs this year at a fifteenth anniversary celebration with J. Frederick Essary, eminent newspaperman and Washington correspondent to the Baltimore Sun, as guest of honor.

This session under the direction of D. Q. Phalen, the publication reached new highs. Not content to exist only in black and white, the Breeze went on the air in the form of weekly commentations over local station WSVA.

This paper lately received again first-honor rating from the National Scholastic Press Association.

It frequently hit campus in streamline editions, and its editorials have gone far towards shaping student opinion. Oh, yes—the Breeze is blowing stronger all the time.

And as for the future—well, the weather man says, "Fair and warmer, with refreshing Breezes every Friday night."

THE "SCHOOLMA'AM" STAFF

The 1938 SCHOOLMA'AM is off the press. It was a September-to-June drive: snapping pictures—pictures of everything important we could get a shot of, with an editorial staff bent on writing sparkling copy to match; harassed typists pounding the keys, getting into the mad rush with everybody else just before a deadline. . . . All this may account for a few preoccupied faces and an added wrinkle or two among certain members of the staff. And we did have several brain-twisters! For the first time the SCHOOLMA'AM is a photographic book, with the art editor looking after the making of pictures for division pages, and the photographic editor securing snapshots, either by having a staff cameraman on hand, or by dormitory drives. To enhance these photographs, rather proudly included, we ran color throughout the book. For the first time, too, attempt was made to write up clubs in feature style. Our only aim through it all was to cover the year 1937-38 in such a way as to have a finished product, breathing the very life of this session.

On the editorial staff were: Helen Shular, editor-in-chief; Jane Logan, assistant editor; Virginia Smith, Dorothy Slaven, Anita Wise, Jane Beery, Janet Miller, Anne Thweatt, Marjorie Hill, Kitty Moltz, Linda Padgett, Tish Holler. Working in unofficial capacity also were: Agnes Bargh, Peggy Byer, Evelyn Patterson.

The art staff included Jewel Schoen, art editor; Kathryn Shull, Virginia Clark, Ruth Warner, Dorothy Newman, Edith Fry, Doris Hodges.

The business staff was composed of the following: Jennie Spratley, business manager; Emma Rand, assistant business manager; Anne Thweatt, Jane Beery.

Louise Ellett, photographic editor, assisted by Jo Chance and Sara Thomason, brought in the snapshots.

Jessie Gearing, Nancy Dick, Esther Leatherman, Dorothy Slaven, and Agnes Bargh ran the typewriters.

Though still comparatively a newcomer, having celebrated its tenth birthday this year, Alpha Chi Chapter has become felt on campus. Probably none of its members could tell you its achievements, but Kappa Delta Pi has been responsible for the organization of two valuable clubs on campus: Alpha Literary Society and Sigma Phi Lambda.

To many underclassmen, it is a select group of "intellectuals" that meet in the closely curtained Kappa Delta Pi room in Reed basement. But once in the room, the viewpoint changes, and one sees a bunch of girls, all leaders in their fields, all congenial and friendly, despite versatility of talents and diversity of interests. Though they are sometimes accused of being individualists, they cooperate in working out the aims of Kappa Delta—fostering scholarship on campus by offering an annual lecture course featuring noted speakers and by giving tutoring to students who need help; increasing their own knowledge of the teaching profession by doing research each year on some vital problem. In that comfortable underground room one would see, too, Dr. W. J. Gifford, beloved counselor of Alpha Chi Chapter, who has guided the chapter faithfully and well for ten years. Ready with advice, chary of destructive criticism, full of constructive criticism, he is the stay and staff of each succeeding group of Kadelpians.

Sigma Phi Lambda is composed of honor students of the junior college level—Freshmen whose names appear on the first honor roll for the fall quarter or who have a B average at the end of the second quarter, and Sophomores who have attained a B average. This organization has as its purpose the encouragement of scholarship among students and the provision of social experience for them.

Varied programs have been given at the bi-monthly meetings. Among the more interesting of these were the talks by several of the faculty members. Mr. Shorts gave readings from poems in Italian dialect. Miss Palmer gave a lecture on "Modern Art," and "Choosing a Life Partner" was the subject of an interesting discussion led by Mrs. Blackwell. Open round-table talks and book reviews were still other interesting features of their meetings.

On April 1, the club sponsored the showing of a motion picture entitled "Life Begins," which, because it dealt with the development of the child, was of particular significance on the campus.

Their varied fields of activity are also shown in the fact that they gave a musical program in chapel, in which the talent was taken from within the club.

THE STRATFORD DRAMATIC CLUB

8:30—House lights are dimmed. Footlights are raised. The curtain parts, and Stratford—the stepping stone of many a potential Cornell presents

"THE SOCIETY"

Under the direction of Dr. Argus Tresidder

This includes a complete theatre group in its entirety. The members are selected from all phases of theatre service. Acting, directing, lighting, staging, makeup, and business administration, are represented in the membership.

The local Thespians opened their dramatic season October 23 with Owen Davis's "The Ninth Guest." This mystery-melodrama, first given in the summer theatre, had the original cast in the October presentation. The story's weird psychological content was ably presented by the group. The staging and lighting, an important phase of the production, was of professional standard. Carol Plott as the murderous host and "ninth" guest, and Maxine Cardwell as the successful young woman lawyer, gave commendable performances. Earl Wine as Tim Salmon, the town's politician, also gave an excellent portrayal.

For the second production, Stratford presented on November 12 a light, amusing comedy concerning the trials and tribulations of the Wyndham family. "Glee Plays the Game," by Alice Gerstenberg, featured an all-feminine cast. Mildred Garnett, in her usual first-rate manner, depicted Mrs. Wyndham. Several new lights of the Madison College stage were seen in Shirley Major as Glee and Barbara Haverty as Amy, both of whose characterizations were very convincing.

Three one-act plays, "The Stolen Prince," by Dan Totleroh, "My Lady Dreams," by Eugene Philpot, and Christopher Morley's "Rehearsal" were given January 22. The first was an interesting satire of Chinese play-production followed by Philpot's symbolic fantasy. Perhaps the most realistic satire on collegiate dramatic societies is the "Rehearsal." This was well presented and enthusiastically received.

For the Home-Coming production, "The Torchbearers," by George Kelly, was presented March 18. This play, a satire on amateur theatre groups, gave us Agnes Bargh in her first legitimate dramatic undertaking. As Mrs. J. Duro Pampinelli, Bargh proved her versatility. George Aldhizer, III, a recruit from the Harrisonburg talent group, Mary Clark, Ruth Peterson, and Patricia Minar gave their usual splendid performances.

The Lanier Literary Society is noted for its ability to do things and for being such a congenial group. The society meets once a week, and throughout this year has had very informal discussions on articles dealing with social and family relationships.

Lanier members each year have much to look forward to: a tea for the Freshmen—a chapel program and a banquet in honor of Sidney Lanier—and among other things, the initiation of new members at the beginning of each quarter. Can you picture these "goats," otherwise known as neophytes, not being on their best behavior and willing and anxious to do all they can to please the old members? Nor can we! The traditional costume—consisting of a white dress and a violet bedecked tiara, with a flute flying about the neck, readily portrays the colors of the club. When an old member walks by, you see these poor girls all over the campus hastening to form the sign of the club, dropping for this purpose their suitcases which, incidentally, signify Lanier's love of travel but are usually employed to carry everybody else's books.

Laniers are very proud to have in their possession a letter from Mrs. Lanier and the table which Sidney Lanier used while writing his "Science of English Verse." Last year Dr. Wayland presented to the society two bunches of violets given to him as favors at the first open meeting, October 8, 1909.

Under the loving guidance of Miss Elizabeth Cleveland and Miss Bessie Lanier the group has established and maintained an attitude of friendship toward one another and others on campus.

"Pages, Pages, Pages!—Bowing constantly are we!"—So lustily sing the Page goats arrayed in red capes and caps on those days of all days—goat days. This trial period before becoming a member of Page Literary Society involves not only "bowing constantly" to old members, but a test of all abilities from the "wiping off" of smiles to the "wiping up" of floors. But the crowning glory of a Page goat's career comes in her initiation, in a solemn ceremony among the old members. Here she is welcomed into the society, where she finds herself among girls who are enjoying their club in both recreation and study.

Let us venture down to the Day Students' Room on Friday evening just after dinner to one of Page's "secret" meetings. Here we find the members informally gathered, listening to the prose or poetry of some modern author, or discussing some business of the club. Or maybe we'll find a bit of entertainment in other lines by some of its versatile members in those meetings for which no special program has been planned.

Page's annual tacky party for the new girls brought out a bunch of gay—instead of homesick—freshmen. Dressed in hilarious costumes, they enjoyed a riotous evening of games and stunts.

The birthday of Thomas Nelson Page, for whom the society was named, was the occasion for a special Page Day during the spring quarter. A chapel program was presented, and the day was brought to an end by a banquet for the members, in the Senior Dining Hall.

It is a versatile group of girls that meets in the music room of Harrison Hall on Friday evenings after dinner to study modern literature. But if you could hear them, you wouldn't think it studying at all, because they read poetry, familiar essays, entertaining skits, and biography. They have also had programs on the drama, the theatre, and recent books.

The Lee girls were among the first to greet new students on campus and, at an informal party, to make them feel themselves a part of the place. On Lee's birthday they had a varied program in chapel, centering around the life and ideals of General Robert E. Lee, for whom the society is named. Special emphasis was placed on the acquisition of courage and knowledge, the two things the club seal stands for. The day was climaxed with a formal banquet. The annual trip to the college camp is the high light of their good times.

But treasured in the memory of every Lee girl is her initiation day. You have probably seen her wearing the customary white dress and a white ribbon with "Lee" in gold on it, standing outside the post office—for she can't go in. When an old member spots her, she salutes her superior in true soldier fashion and humbly agrees to do anything she requests.

Service, she remembers, is what Lee practiced and what is meant by the Confederate gray of the sword which she carries.

THE ALPHA LITERARY SOCIETY

Alpha comes of age! Alpha Literary Society has had a very varied history. Ups and downs—yes, but always more up than down.

The society began as a protege of Kappa Delta Pi, was originally intended to provide girls with training in the procedures and activities of a literary society before they went on to join Lee, Lanier or Page. However, recently Alpha has begun to stand more on its own feet—to develop its own varied interests.

In the past the club has been divided into various groups—poetry, music, travel, drama or sports—which girls joined according to their interests. Each group was headed by a group leader and the whole organization very loosely held together by a president elected for two quarters by the other three literary societies.

The disadvantages of this plan were obvious to the leaders in Alpha as they planned the make-up of the new Alpha.

The new Alpha will be an independent society, standing on its own feet. The club will no longer meet in groups, but as a whole. Programs for the club will be in the hands of a committee composed of the various leaders of the now abandoned groups.

Into the austere and dignified company of Lanier, Lee and Page comes a brash newcomer. And if energy, sincerity and goodwill speak for anything, the newcomer will receive a hearty welcome.

"Hey, Jane, listen to this! My roommate made Aeolian last night. Isn't she one lucky girl?"

Yes, it is an honor to be a member of the honorary music club, for it stands for the best in this field. Aeolian strives to raise the standards of productive musical work on the campus; and to be a member is to be recognized as a girl of outstanding musical ability. This club also gives both moral and material aid to worthy music students.

In order to be a member, one must belong to the music department, must be recommended to the club by a member of the music faculty, and must pass the required entrance examination.

Who provides the music for the social functions on campus? Who is responsible for the girls who play the piano or violin at all teas and banquets and make each occasion one that holds a niche in our memories? The Aeolian Club is the answer, of course.

During the year Aeolian conducts an interesting chapel program, in which are presented vocal, piano, and organ selections. The student body looks forward each year to this unique event.

All in all, this music club fills an important need on the campus.

There is perhaps no other organization on campus except the Glee Club that gets so much fun out of working so hard. In preparation for programs, even in the midst of exams and occasionally during holidays, the members conduct two regular practices weekly, plus numerous call-practices. A busy season this year has claimed prominence in the campus calendar.

The first performance last fall was a broadcast over the local radio station, followed in October by programs for the Kiwanis Club and chapel. The V. M. I. Glee Club appeared in a concert sponsored by the local club and also were entertained during the evening with a dance. On Sunday before Christmas, against a cathedral background, the club, assisted by the local Men's Chorus, presented the annual Christmas Vespers in Wilson Hall.

The winter quarter included programs during the Sunday evening worship hour at the various Harrisonburg churches. Also appearing on the schedule was the widely known Emory University Glee Club of Atlanta, Georgia, readily acclaimed as the "South's Sweetest Singers."

The spring activities exceeded the others in numbers and interest. The Glee Club sponsored programs by the Harrisonburg Union Male Chorus and by the Glee Club of Randolph-Macon Men's College. On Palm Sunday the Glee Club presented to the college and the public an Easter Cantata, one of the three cantatas which were learned this year. Other campus activities besides their regular service as a college choir included singing for the May Queen and her court and for the graduates at commencement. Other engagements included appearances at Front Royal as guests of Harrisonburg Alumnae, at Randolph-Macon College at Ashland, and at V. M. I., Lexington.

THE BLUE-STONE ENSEMBLE

The making of a musician calls for more than practice and solo work, for training in ensemble playing also holds an important place. It was with this in mind that the Blue-Stone Ensemble began its second year under the direction of Mr. J. Edgar Anderson, instructor in violin.

The ensemble is composed of eighteen stringed instruments with hopes for the addition of a section of horns. Many of the players are beginners and have been members for only one quarter, while others are advanced violinists who play in the chapel orchestra and at special programs by invitation.

All the year these musicians-in-the-making have been getting together every Monday evening in the conservatory to practice and, as a result, presented a program in chapel on February the fourth. So well done were the selections from Glück, Mozart, Grieg, and Pache that the students and faculty alike have been clamoring for more. Everyone was more or less astonished to find that there existed on campus an organization of players so well trained that they sounded like professionals, and all are eagerly awaiting another recital.

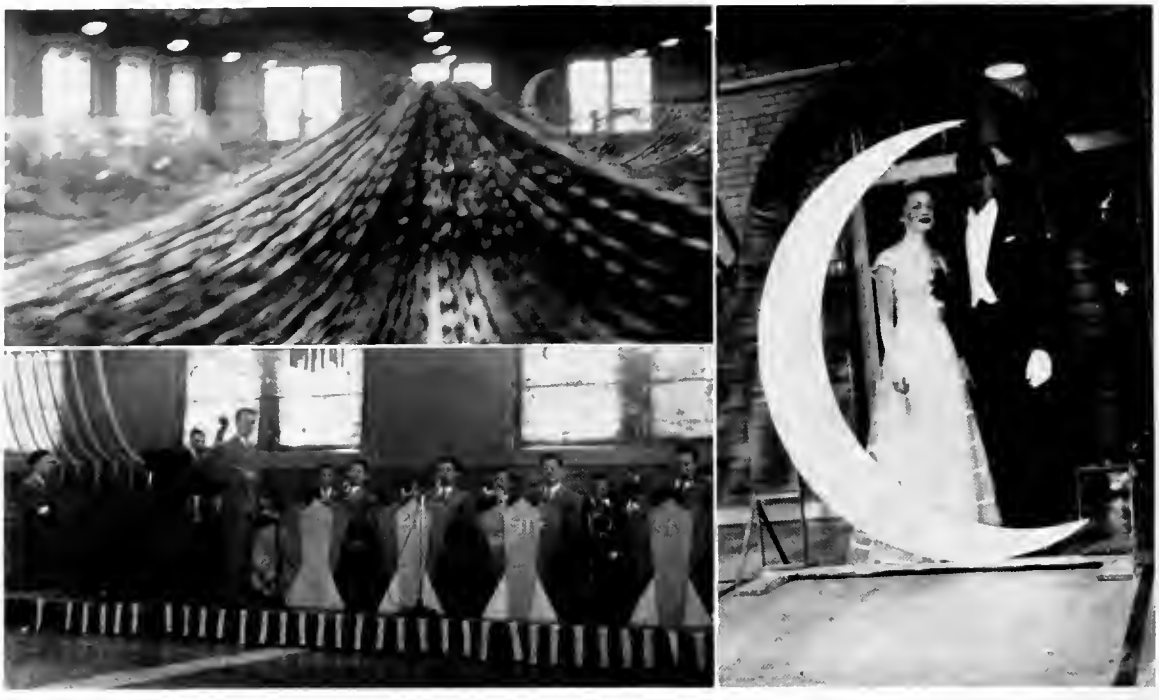
THE CHORAL CLUB

Under the direction of Miss Gladys Michaels, instructor in music, the Choral Club meets every Friday afternoon to sing sacred and secular music and to develop a keener appreciation of choral work and to promote general interest in it.

Seeking good voices and experienced and interested students, the club has opened its membership to sophomores, juniors, and seniors—on try-out.

In its musical capacity, the club has served throughout its three years of existence the chapel, the Y. W. C. A., and some of the local churches.

On April the eleventh the club presented a chapel program, in collaboration with the Glee Club and the entire music department, which proved a unique occasion enthusiastically received by the student body.



Against a background of blue and silver, and Earl Mellen's syncopations, Fannie Slate and John Moncrief led the figure at the Mid-Winter Formals

The scene takes place anywhere on campus—probably in the post office lobby. The time is just before the social outburst of the year—the only formal card dance given—the Midwinter Cotillion Club Dance. The characters are almost any members of the student body, especially those interested in the Terpsichorean art.

"What on earth will I do if my dress doesn't get here on the ten-thirty mail? . . . If I get a telegram saying he can't come, I'll just die. . . . Oh, it's going to be beautiful—soft lights and sweet music, you know, and plenty of star-dust. And when those girls step over that crescent moon in those gorgeous dresses—well, I just can't wait. . . . You simply must meet my date. He's a grand dancer, and I know you'll like him. If he doesn't come, I'll never ask him to a dance again. . . . This is some kind of weather—with all this rain. It's really doing things to my hair."

And so the comments go on and on. The eventful afternoon and night come and go, and that morning-after-the-night-before feeling is dominant for several days. There's no doubt about it—what this college needed was bigger and better orchestras, like Earl Mellen's.

Alpha Rho Delta, after a lapse of a few months in the fall, suddenly recuperated and started off with the speed of winged Mercury. Although it has no particular material feat to bring to the public, it has something there in the twenty-eight "capellae" which were incorporated in the club during the year. As demonstrated in an initiation, Cicero is still alive, and perhaps will honor the student body with an oration sometime in the future.

The sponsor, Dr. Sawhill, has been indoctrinating his Latin classes this year in the profound subject of Greek in no incidental way. Next year the club may be truly Greek, and not merely a classical club with a Greek name.

To further publicize itself, the club selected a standard pin, and now its members have Alpha Rho Delta close to their hearts in more ways than one.

Since the new curriculum is in full sway these days, the club has gone modern. It is learning the worthy use of leisure time by working Latin crossword puzzles, going on picnics, and having "convivia bona" at Mrs. Sawhill's. However, it is leaving the "Domus Romana" for next year's members to complete, so they can exert their artistic ability on something worthwhile.

Since the remedy against boredom is brevity, we say "Ave atque Vale."

Le Cercle Français endeavors to foster an interest in French and in French correctly spoken; so the procedure of the meetings is carried out as far as possible in French.

The club is very fortunate in having as an honorary member Dr. Carl McConnell, a new and valued addition to the faculty, who has studied much abroad. In the fall he gave an illustrated lecture, showing the movies he had made in Paris. In the spring he entertained the club at his home.

A French motion picture, Primerose, was secured by Le Cercle Français in May. An assembly program was used to familiarize the student body with the story beforehand. Earlier in the year the club cooperated with the high school in presenting Sans Famille, another French motion picture.

In May the organization paid homage to its patron saint, Joan of Arc, on her birthday. The members wore their insignia, the fleur-de-lis, and placed a wreath on her statue in Harrison Hall.

Gone are the days of flamboyant, flowery, "affectatious" oratorical pompousness! So, in the modern trend, the Debating Club has simplified its contests. Experiments with symposium speaking and radio debating were tried this year, as well as the regular debates.

The national question—debated, of course, by the local club—was, "Resolved: That the National Labor Relation Board should be empowered to enforce arbitration in all industrial disputes." Of course a question so close to modern life and so vital could not but excite argument. Sure enough, the disputes were hot between the H. T. C. girls and all comers.

The local Kiwanis Club was treated to a symposium on the question by members of the club. The regular debates, however, were with Bridgewater and Hampden-Sydney colleges. The Bridgewater debate was broadcast over the local station, WSVA, while the Hampden-Sydney debate took place in Wilson auditorium. The debating club itself undertook no trips this year—being content to hold its debates here and to entertain royally the visiting teams.

THE PHILOSOPHY CLUB

OFFICERS

Librarian ..... CLARA BRUCE

Four-thirty in the afternoon on Blue Monday! Can you imagine anyone as being energetic at that hour? But the embryo Aristotelians that make up the Philosophy Club go in for their hardest work at that time, though it's purely intellectual labor. Every other week a faithful group meets to discuss a wide range of questions and topics. Perhaps a student will be reporting on the Oxford Group movement, or a member of the Current Events class will be leading a heated discussion of Fascism. Perhaps a faculty member holds sway—Dr. Tresidder sitting on a table, swinging his feet and discoursing on Aesthetics. Not content with home talent, they often call in outside speakers—notably Dr. Frank Price, who talked to a large group of students under the joint sponsorship of the Philosophy Club and Philosophy class.

This group certainly disproves the theory that philosophy is removed from life. Long and heated discussions often continue until the sound of the dinner bell rises above the other clamor, and hunger rises above more intellectual urges.

Club organization is very informal, consisting of only a secretary, who sends notices of the time of meetings and the topics for battle, and a librarian, who searches out the words of the ancient philosophers on the subject.

Do you count segments on earthworms? Do you have any curiosity as to how the bacteria on your fingertips look under the microscope? Do you enjoy the thrill of dissecting a frog? If you do, you're probably a member of the Curie Science Club.

This club is strictly for science majors, and holds as its purpose to foster an interest in scientific affairs on campus. It has as its unique feature a joint membership witih the Virginia Academy of Science, of which every student in this club automatically becomes a member.

Twice a month these aspiring scientists meet in the club room to exchange ideas on the problems of the material universe. Informal discussions, with division into groups according to individual interests, give each member a chance to contribute her bit of knowledge to the vast field of science. Here we find them weighing such questions as the temperature on Mars, the nutritional value of certain foods, or the causes of earthquakes.

In accordance with their purpose, the organization sponsors a chapel program each year for the student body. This year Dr. Harvey A. Neville of Lehigh University spoke to the Assembly on the ballyhoo of advertising. The purpose of his address was not to attack advertising in general, but to help the public condemn the type of advertising which insults its intelligence and betrays science. The students who left chapel that day were certainly wiser and more science-minded than when they went in.

"On with Science" is the motto of this club, and what could be a more appropriate one? The members are certainly doing their part to further this course, and who knows but that some day there may come from this organization a second Madame Curie?

The presentation of several movies has been of wide interest. Among these were: "Simba," Martin Johnson's film on wild life in Africa; "Daylighting the Trail of the Padres" and "Science and Magic." Another feature was Southgate Hoyt, student from W. & L. who talked on birds and gave records or recordings of bird calls.

International Relations Club is still a comparatively new organization on campus, and still has all the vigor of youth. And what vigor it does need in times such as this! The traditional indifference of college students to affairs outside their own narrow ken is belied by this earnest group of girls.

The club has spent much time this year in decorating the new room which it shares with the Curie Science Club.

Programs are mostly on current affairs, reported by students; but an occasional program is designed to give club members an insight into the background of life in Europe.

Perhaps the most valuable asset of this club, which is recognized by every member, is the interest in current problems affecting us all, which is aroused in students and which remains after they have left college. The club feels that an intelligent interest in and understanding of political and economic problems, on the part of American voters, is the best and, indeed, the only way to preserve American peace and to sustain and improve our democratic form of government.

Favors, decorations, posters,—these and many other things of use and beauty are loyally contributed by the Art Club each year to student activities.

This organization is composed of those girls on campus who are interested in furthering general interest and appreciation in art. Its purpose is to unite the group in activities in which they may make use of their talents.

Each quarter new members adorn the campus, dressed in gay smocks and "tams," industriously carrying palettes. The pledges must pass a successful try-out and, for part of their initiation this year, made wall hangings for the club room.

The members have recently been very enthusiastic over the remodeling of the Art Club Room. For the past year their main problem was making new drapes. These create a very "arty" atmosphere about the place and seem to encourage good work, from the looks of the products put forth.

Don't be misled to believe that this organization is one-sided. Of course they believe in "art for art's sake," but they also have their social side as well. One social affair on their calendar was a dinner and theatre party recently arranged by the club for its members.

We have no doubt that the Art Club has the right technique, all right, when it comes to structural lines and rhythm.

Dr. Pickett is an honorary member, while Miss Aiken and Miss Palmer serve as sponsors.

THE GARDEN CLUB

Tick, tock, tick, tock . . . brrrringalingaling! This is the first sound of spring on campus, and no one would mind if it didn't come so very, very early in the morning. But we have to put our heads under the covers and bear it, because these girls who own the alarm clocks have reputations—reputations as slender slips of girls who get in their daily dozen by digging ditches and who say it with flowers.

This year they have completed the moving of the garden from its former location on the hillside to a level spot behind the conservatory. They have planted seeds and bulbs, watered and hoed them, and as a result they have supplied armfuls of cut flowers for the dining halls and reception rooms.

In their spring chapel program they showed a movie entitled Virginia Gardens.

Experience for garden club members is delightful and varied. In meetings they study home decorations with and without cut flowers, Japanese flower gardens, gardens in literature, and effective flower arrangement. While working in the garden, they become acquainted with various types of plants and the soil requirements of each; and when they're tired of tilling and toiling, they ride with Miss Palmer, their sponsor, to some good place and eat.

The Rural Life Club, the latest comer to take its place among campus organizations, began its second year of existence by adopting for special study the topic, "Home and Its Relations to the Community." This theme has been admirably carried out by the club in its varied activities.

In December the club was host to Dr. Ellis Kirkpatrick, who is leader of youth work at the University of Wisconsin and who is nationally known for his interest in rural life communities.

Mrs. Blackwell, of the home economics department, later talked to the club about Parent-and-Child Relationship.

As a handicraft project for this year the members made leather gloves.

Their enthusiasm was shown to the student body through their chapel program which was the presentation of a typical semi-monthly meeting, together with a fashion review showing creations made and modeled by the advanced clothing class.

This club is a member of the National Rural Life Association, and this year sent a delegate to the Youth Section of the American Country Life Association Convention, held at Kansas State Agricultural College.

The Rural Life members feel that they have been successful in carrying out the purpose of the club by helping to educate themselves—a diminutive sector of the youth of America—so that they may serve their communities better and help others understand the meaning of country life.

Probably the most unique organization on campus is that of the day students. Composed of girls who live "double lives" for four years, this group is active and wide-awake. Perhaps the name fails to strike a responsive chord in your memory. Remember when Ali Baba in The Arabian Nights used the words "Open, Sesame!" to gain admission to the treasure caves? When the Club was first organized about seven years ago, the name chosen was Sesame, for that word signifies the purpose of the Club—to open the campus for the day student.

The activity into which the group puts most of its efforts is the improvement of the day students' room in the basement of Harrison Hall. This large and spacious room has been beautified during the past year by new curtains, a refinished floor, a newly-painted ceiling, and the addition of handsome cushion covers.

In the fall quarter the Sesame Club has its annual luncheon in the College Tea Room. To this affair each Club member invites two of her campus friends, which idea tends to carry out the purpose of the organization.

At Christmas this group has its own tree. Gifts are exchanged, and a party in keeping with the gayety and hilarity of the season holds full sway.

The Sesame Club tries to contribute to the college through its chapel programs. It brings prominent speakers as well as musicians from the local community.

The Sesame's social life is culminated by its annual tea given in Alumnae Hall. Here again campus girls are guests of the Club, and each member invites her mother.

In the spring come the two most enjoyable times of the year—a week-end at camp and an evening picnic.

The Sesame Club is striving to carry out its aim of making the college life of the day student integrated and useful.

Have you ever stopped to think who is responsible for the dainty refreshments served at the Thursday afternoon teas? Back in the tiny kitchen of Alumnae Hall several Frances Sale girls will be working—anxious to see the thing well done.

Perhaps you wonder who Frances Sale is. She was the first teacher of home economics at Harrisonburg, and her fine work has left its mark. She was one of the founders of first-class home economics teaching in the state. It is in honor of her that the Frances Sale Club was organized on our campus.

The revised constitution this year makes the club mean more to its members and gives each a better chance to show her leadership and ability.

A variety of programs are planned to interest the more than one hundred girls. This session an exhibit of hobbies was quite fascinating and showed collections of pitchers and pictures, glass animals, stamps, crafts and needle-work of all kinds.

Suitable dress for various occasions and current style trends furnished a subject for discussion at one meeting.

The new members taken in during the fall quarter were honored at an informal party. A trip to camp offered the members a real chance to prove domestic abilities that naturally should be required and practiced by every major in home economics. At the beginning of the spring quarter, the solemnity of a candlelight service set the background for the installation of officers for next year.

THE HIKING CLUB

When cool, crisp, clear days arrive, those more energetically inclined put the thought of books behind them and begin dragging out from the moth-balls their worn but willing hiking equipment.

The Hiking Club, of course, is their next thought! It began several years ago, and well has it succeeded in its purpose of showing the college students more of the surrounding country.

Anyone who enjoys the pleasures of nature study and walking is more than welcome to join this organization. A letter is awarded to any member who has hiked fifty or more miles, with twenty of the fifty miles in ten-mile trips.

With gaiety and vigor sounding the key-note, this year's hiking group would set out for some five-mile tramp or to cover the eight miles to and from Dayton, or to some other nearby goal. And then, too, climbing Massanutten Peak and "doing" its caverns is an annual event, led by Dr. Duke. Each member is given, also, an opportunity to spend a week-end at the college camp, near Port Republic.

Totaling about 220 members, the club has as president Faye Quick, and as group leaders, Emilie Hardie, Mary Land, and Esther Sampson.

Book Five

A SPORT the year around — from crisp fall days with maneuvers on the hockey field to spring, when sun glasses, peasant scarfs, and culottes make their appearance on the tennis courts — that's typical. The entire season is always a full one, but into this year's already well-filled schedule a new game was entered—badminton. With the interest spread over such a wide variety of sports, it comes to this: almost everyone is either a "headliner" or an active "sideliner."

• • • VARSITY

The varsity hockey squad was busy from the first autumn day making plans for the Virginia Field Hockey Tournament, which was to be held in November.

Regular practice began the week of October 18, with thirty-one girls appearing for training, five of whom were first-string players from the previous year. The group worked hard, however, and vacant positions were adequately filled.

October 22—Affirmative replies had been received from seven of the eleven colleges invited to participate in the State Hockey Tournament.

October 29—William and Mary, Sweet Briar, Mary Baldwin, Fredericksburg, William and Mary Alumnae, Randolph-Macon, Westhampton, and Hollins College were reported as definitely planning to be represented.

November 5—Representatives from these colleges arrived on campus. Teams came also from Meredith College, N. C., Duke University, William and Mary, Richmond Division, Campus Characters Club, Sweet Briar College. Harrisonburg Varsity-A team exhibited its skill in holding Sweet Briar College down to a scoreless last half, when the two teams met in a fast game which ended in a 4-0 victory for Sweet Briar. After this game the executive committee met, composed of a representative from each college. Miss Marbut was elected president of the State Hockey Association for the ensuing year.

November 6—Games were played between Et Cetera teams. Harrisonburg Varsity-A played again, meeting Salem College. Harrisonburg Varsity-B played on an Et Cetera team and played an excellent game—fast and heady. Then the selection committee, composed of officials and coaches from the colleges, met to arrange state teams of outstanding players. These teams were announced at the luncheon given by the College to all guests. Peggy Byer, left half-back, was named on the Virginia-B squad, while Billie Powell, left wing, and Jean VanLandingham, center half, were chosen on the Virginia-C team. This concluded a tournament featuring fifteen games.

November 13—Game with Westhampton called off because of inclement weather conditions.

November 19—Miss Marbut, Peggy Byer, Jean VanLandingham, and Billie Powell left for William and Mary College to attend the Southeast Hockey Tourney.

December 10—The annual hockey banquet was held in Bluestone Dining Hall, when Miss Marbut presented emblems to the varsity members. Martha Fitzgerald, Crewe, received the traditional rabbit's foot from Ann VanLandingham, whom she will succeed as captain next year.

• • • VARSITY

Following the class basketball season, consisting of individual class practices and hard-fought intramural games, the varsity squad was selected by Mrs. Johnston, coach. Immediately this "survival of the fittest" began preparation for the season's schedule. This preparation was no lazy man's job; it consisted of daily squad practices plus outside individual work. But this was no hindrance to our fair set of basketeers, and like Trojans they faithfully worked to get themselves in the best possible form.

The first game of the season was played on the local court with East Stroudsburg State Teachers College of Pennsylvania on January 29. After putting up a hard fight against a more compact team of larger-built girls, the purple-and-gold was defeated by a score of 14-19 in this first encounter.

Not discouraged by this first defeat, the team emerged victorious over Frostburg State Teachers College, Maryland, by a 33-19 count, in the second match on the home floor. These opponents had not been met since two years ago, when H. T. C. won on the Frostburg court.

Displaying compactness in teamwork and exhibiting its usual skillful passwork, the varsity defeated Westhampton College by a score of 32-16 in the third consecutive game at Harrisonburg. This made the seventh successive victory that the varsity had won over Westhampton.

On the week-end of February 25, the sextet journeyed to New York City, where it bowed to Savage School of Physical Education, 34-21. This team had been defeated only once during the '38 season, and the tilt with H. T. C. proved to be an easier battle for them than their victory of the previous year.

Although the varsity tied New College last year, these opponents proved their superiority over Harrisonburg as they piled up a 43-24 victory. In both the New College and Savage games, the 3-court method of play was used in the last half.

The purple-and-gold concluded its season on March 4, when it suffered its fourth defeat at the hands of Farmville State Teachers College. Playing its best game of the year, Farmville was held down to 24 points, while Harrisonburg totaled 18.

The squad was not led by an elected captain this year, but a player was appointed to act in each game.

INTERCLASS SPORTS

HOCKEY

Hockey really did start off with a bang. Soon after school began, we dug out our hockey sticks and wondered whether we could still "swing a mean stick." Thoughts of running up and down the field reminded us that a fast and furious season was ahead and several hotly contested games were to be played. Hockey leaders organized teams, and practice was begun. In the class games it was shown that experience can be the best teacher, since the Seniors gained first place, the Juniors second, and the Sophomores and Freshmen tied for third place.

The climax of the season was the "Odd-Even" game. The chosen teams from sister classes played a fast game, which ended with the Evens ahead with a score of 3 to 1.

Jean VanLandingham, varsity center half, was the school sport leader for hockey. The class leaders were Senior, Evelyn Patterson; Junior, Janet Wimer; Sophomore, Jane Pridham; Freshman, Charlotte Beville.

BASKETBALL

Again this year, as in the years previous, the interclass basketball season was complete in its enthusiasm and participation. Though the sophomores were victorious in the number of games won, the total of points for all games showed that all classes were comparatively equal.

Those girls selected to lead their class squads were Margaret Glover, Senior, Fay N. Quick, Junior, Adeline (Tommy) Tucker, Sophomore, Dorothea Fleischer, Freshman. Leslie Purnell, Salisbury, Md., was chosen by the student body as varsity basketball sport leader.

At the close of the season, each girl who was active in the required number of practices and games was awarded her respective class numeral in recognition of her outstanding work.

We hope that next year's interclass basketball season will prove as enjoyable and worth while.

BASEBALL

With the belief that the major sport, baseball, is chiefly a man's game, the pretty things on Madison campus proved that girls, too, like activity, and plenty of it—to rid themselves of superfluous poundage!

Approximately 145 signed up for it. They were rearranged to compose color teams, a combination of all classes together. Games in this manner will be played before the regular class challenges begin.

Practice begins at 4:30. Girls wear gym suits or slacks and begin a steady, diligent practice by getting "warmed up" by a keen trot, exercising, and then going into the real game itself of pitching, catching, batting, and using their heads once in a while—even in baseball scrimmages. Although the hour is all too short, they do work up a "sweat" in eagerness.

Freshmen are always unusually strong, but the Sophomores refuse to be conquered.

With predictions for an enthusiastic and successful year, I say, "C'mon, gang, and let's go for baseball!"

SWIMMING

Faithfully, the daughters of Neptune went through their daily routine of swimming for speed, distance, and exactness of stroke. On March 26, these mermaids lined up before a balcony crowded to the brim with anxious spectators. They were off with the whistle for honors in the crawl, the breast stroke, the back crawl, relay races, and diving. A novelty consisted of a pajama relay, which brought peals of laughter from all. The Senior class presented the high light of the evening, "The Wedding of Mr. H_2 and Miss O." Georgie Law, swimming sport leader for the school, tied for individual honors with Jane Pridham. The Sophomore team placed first in the meet, followed by the Freshman and Junior.

Class sport leaders were Anne VanLandingham, Senior; Martha Fitzgerald, Junior; Jane Pridham, Sophomore; and Jeannette Donahue, Freshman.

TENNIS

Before the courts could be given fair attention, the tennis enthusiasts were already pounding away at balls. Such eagerness on the part of the students had to be duly met by an interesting tennis program set up by the Athletic Association.

This association is endeavoring to abandon class competition in a step towards sport for health and pleasure only. With this in mind tennis was put on the level of individual competition and, as a result, twenty students participated in a ladder tournament.

The organization in its attempt to further sport enthusiasm, directed a program of instruction for beginners. Fifty people were given instruction with the help of Miss Marbut, Miss Savage, the advanced sports class, and the tennis sport leaders.

Matches were conducted under the supervision of the members of the sports class, who served as scorekeepers and umpires.

The increased use of the tennis courts on the part of players brought about a complete working over of the courts by Mr. Long's crew.

GOLF

Many a girl, driving high and wide down the fairway, made golf a favorite late-spring sport this year. Enthusiasts from the Freshman and Senior classes were especially careful in making sure they got their nine holes played regularly. Competition, however, was put on an individual rather than on a class basis.

Of major interest was the tournament. Ruth Schafer, school sport leader, got the average scores of the contestants and lined up a ladder tournament accordingly.

The class sport leaders, Louise Ellett, Senior, Muriel Yavelow, Junior, Betty Whitelegg, Freshman, were on hand to get novices off to a good start.

Yvette Kohn, School Sport Leader

BADMINTON

Although introduced in India many decades ago, badminton has in recent years enjoyed an internationally popular revival. On Madison campus it was received enthusiastically. Besides interest in a singles and doubles elimination tournament, badminton was a popular sport on the class athletic calendar. Yvette Kohn, college sport leader, familiarized interested novices with the game and made "badminton" mean something in the vocabulary of the huge public at the end of the practice.

The season was brought to an end with a tournament.

Peggy Byer and Evelyn Patterson were the victorious partners in the doubles tournament. Peggy was also singles champion.

CHEERING SQUAD

A flash of purple and gold! It's the ribbon of the cheer leader bobbing up before the throng, stirring up school spirit for a mighty yell.

The cheering squad got into the limelight the first week of the fall quarter at the bonfire. Here many an old girl brushed up on her cheering, and the new girls got into the swing of it.

Probably the squad got the best results of the year during the siege caused by the Old Girl-New Girl basketball game.

Their snake dance, performed between the halves of two games was also of interest.

These are times of great change, and the cheering will be no exception. We are now Madison College—and next season will witness an entirely new set of rah-rahs. So, let's give a hand, a locomotive, and a pump of fifteen rahs for next year!

February 14-15—(20) The American Repertory Theatre presents "School for Scandal" and "The Queen's Husband."

February 16—The Emory Glee Club fulfills its reputation as the "South's Sweetest Singers."

February 18—(21) Juniors—with brush, palette, and plenty of artistic temperament—spend their class day painting the clouds with sunshine.

February 25-26—Varsity basketball finds the big city slicker than they expected as New York's Savage and New College squads defeat them.

February 26—A high light in the Lyceum course is the world-famous Jooss Ballet. Even Miss Marbut's natural dancing class is put to shame.

March 2—(22) Dr. Harry A. Neville talks on "Chemical Light on Advertising Lure."

March 7—(23) Opening the season of fast 'n furious words, H. T. C. meets Hampden-Sydney debaters, in a non-decision match.

March 8—(24) Scoop!! Madison reigns, and H. T. C. is no more. The new name becomes effective June 21.

March 14—Woe! Woe! Work and worry! Exam time marches to the front.

March 18-19—(25-26) Alumnae are heartily welcomed, what with "The Torchbearers," an open house, luncheon, and the dance for entertainment.

March 21—(27) Japanese cherry trees in full bloom are just another way of saying "Spring is here!"

March 23—(28) Dr. F. W. Boatwright, president of the University of Richmond, speaks at the installation service for new Student Government officers. Afterward, a luncheon is given.

March 26—Class swimmers splash in annual meet, and the cup goes to Georgette Law and Jane Pridham.

March 31—The old order gives way to the new, as out-going Y. W. officers give the light of their candles to their successors.

April 8—(29) 300 plundering Pirates capture campus on Freshman Day.

April 10—The Glee Club gives a cantata at the annual Palm Sunday service.

April 14—The Randolph-Macon Glee Club invades campus to the tune of "Harbor Lights."

April 15-20—(30) Time out, as Madison gals afford the Greyhound lines extra business. They're off for Easter vacation!

April 22—Page is in the spotlight on its annual day.

May 7—Her Majesty, Virginia Blain, holds sway over the annual May Day celebration. Later on, Royalty and the court swing off with their dignity, to the music of Bob Riley's orchestra.

May 31—We're keeping our fingers crossed, 'cause it's exam time once more. Maybe our bad luck will change—maybe.

June 3—It's a big day today on campus! The goings-on include the garden party, a music recital, and the commencement dance.

June 4—Class Day exercises are held, with a movie afterwards. Stratford's last play of the season "Everywoman" is enjoyed by a capacity audience.

June 5—Rev. W. L. Carson, D. D., delivers the impressive commencement sermon.

June 6—The graduating class sail out, in the height of admiration, after Dr. Francis P. Gaines's address. "Sail on, nor fear to breast the sea! Our hearts, our hopes, are all with thee."

Book Seven

IT'S in every careful detail of dress, in their spirited gait—the girls are off to town with characteristic swagger.

The long gay procession moves from the college to the business section of town and returns laden with the curious array of packages that only the indefatigable H. T. C. purchaser can pick up on short notice. Or maybe the only returning evidence is the stub of a theatre ticket tucked away in some depleted purse. And so, day after day this procession moves to town, keeping in step with the times.

Creating

YEAR BOOKS

of Distinction

It takes more than "good printing" to create outstanding Year Books.

The J. P. Bell Company specializes in Year Books. First, by maintaining a Department of trained and experienced personnel that devotes its entire time to the planning and servicing of Year Books. Secondly, by maintaining a plant equipped with the most modern machinery, manned by skilled, efficient workmen.

There is a certain mark of Distinction on all J. P. Bell publications.
